

CAROLYN IVORY

Carolyn Ivory, the popular secretary of the Tuesday Morning Mixed league at Parkland Bowl, holds a unique distinction of having an indirect connection with two of this country's most memorable tragedies in the past 50 years.

On November 22, 1963, she was late traveling to Dealey Plaza in Dallas, Tex., to witness President John F. Kennedy and his wife ride through town in a motorcade and instead saw Jacqueline Kennedy leaning over and cradling her mortally wounded husband in an open limousine that passed by at a high rate of speed. The image of the First Lady's wind-extended hair remains frozen in her mind.

On October 21, 2001, just over a month after the September 11 attacks, she learned that her league's president, Thomas Morris Jr. of Suitland, a distribution clerk at the Beltsville mail facility in Northwest Washington, died of anthrax poisoning, one of five individuals to have suffered that cruel fate in what was first believed to be yet another attack on Americans.

After a recent league session, Ivory told editor Bob Cosgrove of some of her favorites.
